Contrary to the obfuscatory efforts of various enemies of the Wikipedia project, the so-called "Wikipedia movement" is a real thing.

It consists of:

- A. Paid functionaries of the Wikimedia foundation.
- B. Administrators at any of the various projects.
- C. Active volunteer contributors of content or maintenance services who see themselves as stakeholders in the encyclopedia project.

There is obviously a little grey area with category C between "casual" and "active" contributors. Conscious allegiance to the project seems a key consideration.
